

Studying Abroad in

LONDON

PLAY

London Telephone Booth

There's a saying that goes "When a man is tired of London, he is tired of life". Indeed, London has a lot to offer when it comes to entertainment. The Soho and Covent Garden districts are very popular haunts, apart from interesting sights at Piccadilly Circus. London is also definitely a shopping haven. You can find the latest trends in fashion in the Knightsbridge and Kensington districts, as well as the world's largest department stores in Harrods.

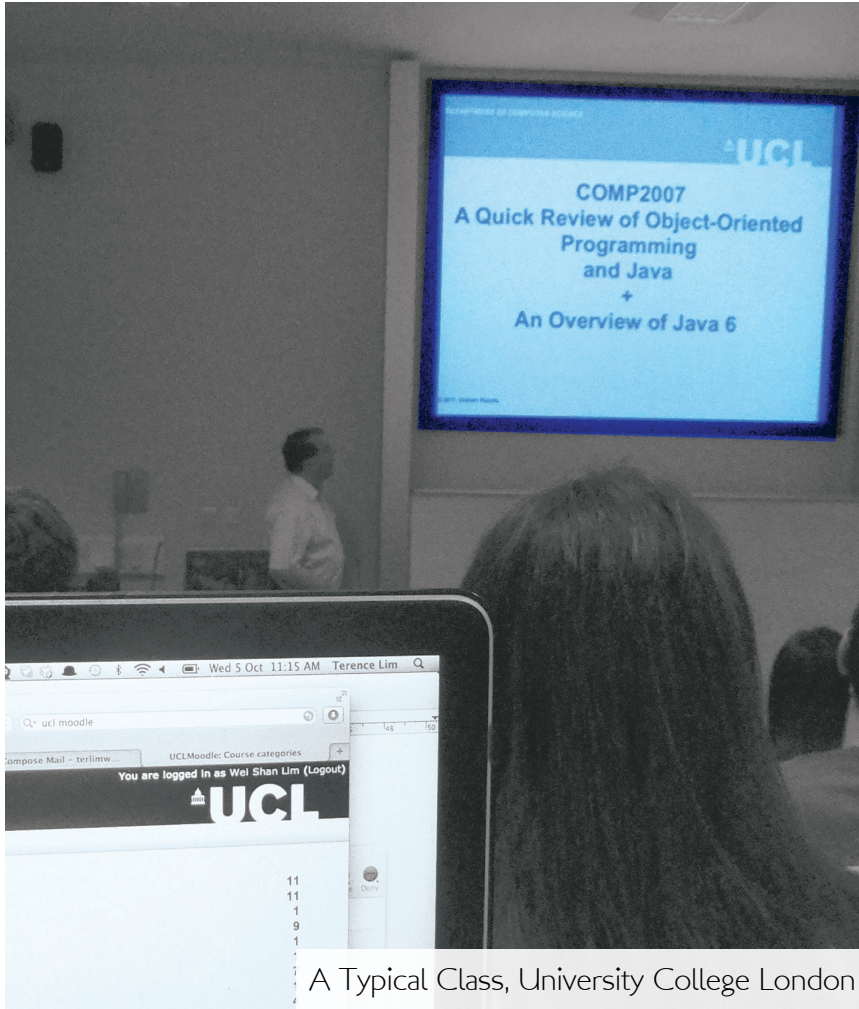

Street Signs, Carney Street

Mr. Bean, Covent Garden

LEARN

A Typical Class, University College London

London is an awesome city for studying abroad. Top ranking universities include University College London (UCL) where I studied abroad, Imperial College London (ICL), London School of Economics (LSE), King's College London (KCL), and the list goes on. Studying in London provides students with an opportunity to work and play hard. It is easy to balance study and social life, as London has so much to offer.

Portico, University College London

EAT

Chinese Stall, Camden Market

London is not only a cosmopolitan city, but also a food paradise. As you roam around the streets of London, it is almost impossible to miss the sights of American, Asian or European restaurants. If you are feeling rich enough, there are also Michelin stars restaurants dining to splurge on. There are also food markets such as the Borough Market - a market that has captured London's rich culinary skills, and offers a rich collection of British and international produce.

Main Course, Michelin Star Restaurant

Spanish Stall, Borough Market

Terence studied abroad in University College London in the Fall semesters of 2011 and 2012. He is passionate about travelling and meeting new people. During his stay in London, he has travelled almost the whole of Europe and made many awesome friends. He would like to encourage students to study abroad in London.